

Vital Statistics of Adams County, Pennsylvania 1800-1825

Marriages, Deaths, and Events from The Adams Centinel Newspaper

Compiled by Randy J. Miller

Gettysburg and Adams County's first newspaper, The Adams Centinel, was founded by Robert Harper in early November 1800. The Centinel (later spelled Sentinel) was a weekly newspaper and originally available to the public every Wednesday. The newspaper had four pages with primary coverage of foreign, national, and state news and correspondence. Local news was limited to advertisements, official announcements, and little else. It was not until the August 12, 1801 issue that the first local news item was reported; David McConaughy Sr. of Menallen Township had his house struck by lightning. Within the next five years, local news coverage began to accelerate and by 1825, nearly twelve hundred local events had been reported. The newspaper started out Federalist, became Whig and eventually Republican. Robert Harper owned and operated the paper until their son, Robert G. Harper could take over. Robert G. Harper was in charge of the business until his death in 1870.
